EVENING GOWNS

BY MAY MANTON

EVENING gowns are really sumptuous in their beauty. Wonderful broadcated velvets, exquisite laces, gleaming silks and satins, and all sorts of beautiful trimmings are used for their making. The much talked of minaret styles have had a certain influence and short tunics are much worn and flounced skirts are liked for the younger contingent. Women who like the extreme effect wear the tunics at their lower edges, but the greater number are content with such trimming as fur banding and beaded edges, the very nature of which requires the tunic to stand off a little from the foundation skirt.

Lace in all its forms is fashionable, but one of the novelties is lace with the design outlined with pearl or crystal beads and beaded laces make a rather important feature of the handiwork gowns. Gold trimmings and gold lace are extensively used also, and on white satin make an exceedingly beautiful effect. In addition to the lace, net and tulle are in vogue and often they are combined by hand with some little delicate tracery of silk or some design outlined with beads. Bead embroideries on silk and satin are much worn also, and the season is altogether a resplendent one.

Bodices for evening wear are almost uniformly made with kimono sleeves found in the profusion of beads, in the abundance of gold and in the general brilliancy of evening toilettes. Frequently one color is arranged over another, and some exceedingly subtle and indescribable effects are obtained thereby. We veil everything. Plain silks, embroidered silks and broadcated silks are veiled with tulle and with marquise, and frequently entire gowns of satin are covered with thin transparent materials. Not a few of the handiwork silks are broadcated with gold and with silver. Luxury is expressed in many forms. Many materials are, indeed, so gorgeous as to suggest only royal use, yet they are offered in every day shops and are purchased by every day folk. Fur makes the most fashionable of all trimmings. It is almost ubiquitous, for it appears upon simple blouses as well as upon evening gowns and strict costumes, but it appears at its best in combination with rich silk and handsome lace, and often the touch of fur gives the finish and means the distinction found in the model gown that is generally admired without, perhaps, the analysis that would reveal that fact. There is a harmony to be found in silk, lace and fur that we all feel, and to which the beauty of the combination is due. On light colored gowns the dark brown of the skunk often is more effective than any other color, but all sorts are fashionable. Pure white ermine is a fancy of the season and is lovely for many uses. For a time the absence of the familiar tails left some doubt in the mind as to the genuineness of the skins, but we have learned to know and to admire tailless ermine with its pure, unsullied and unspotted white.

THE autumn is ever the season of weddings and of trousseaux and costumes have an especial interest. An exceedingly smart going-away suit that has just been completed is made of diverson in a beautiful shade of almost green. It consists of a quite untrimmed skirt that is just a little draped at the front with over it a tunic that is shorter at the front and longer at the back but which reaches only to the knees at its longest point. This tunic shows plaits right at the front, in conformity with the very newest idea, and again at each side of the back, there being a rather wide lace plait effect at the center. The coat is an odd one with slightly full sleeves joined to it at the slightly elongated shoulder line. It is slightly high waisted and the body portion is soft and full after the manner of a blouse but there is a little perfun that is much outworn and which is finished at each side of the plaits that form the front of the tunic. The trimming consists of a deep collar of mink skin and a little band on the fancy belt and oddly shaped cuffs. To be worn with this costume is a hat of velvet in matching color and there are shoes and stockings that match the tone of the fur while a big mink of mink-skin is designed to be carried therewith. Muffs are big and soft and fascinating. They give a finishing touch to the toilette and they allow of infinite coquetry and charm. Women who study the art can get from them almost as much as the Spanish woman from her fan and, in any case, they make a picturesque effect.

We are doing all sorts of contradictory things in the matter of dress just now. We wear double skirts and draped skirts over the hips and abdomen; we wear short little jackets and throw them open recklessly; we wear low shoes, so matter what the thermometer may register, but no matter how incongruous, no matter how apparently absurd, the effect is charming and the feminine mind is content. Incidentally, it may be added that physicians claim that we are hygienically clothed as well. Open necks mean hardened conditions and the lack of weight removes pressure. When the day is really cold we can slip on a long, loose, enveloping coat over any costume and the coats of the season are fascinating in the extreme. It is a season of a great deal of color but, nevertheless, black holds its own and black velvet of the new light weight, soft sort is a real delight. A costume that embodies variations of the new features is made of black velvet with trimming of silky black fox. The skirt is perfectly plain and straight but over it is a long, draped tunic that falls in folds over the hips, after the manner of the peg top, the front edges of which are tapered while it is finished at the front and lower edges with a wide band of the fur. There is a little bodice of softly draped, creamy lace.

Rheumatism is Driven From Body of F. M. Westerlin of Taber, Alta., in 24 Treatments—He is Convinced he is Cured and Returns to His Work

F. M. WESTERLIN,
Taber, Alberta.

Mr. F. M. Westerlin, of Taber, Alta., who says he contracted rheumatism through working in the water and being exposed to damp and cold, adds in a signed statement in the possession of the superintendent of the Edmonton Sanatorium, that he suffered great pains and could not do his work.

Mr. Westerlin sought the Human Bake Oven. He took 24 treatments, "and," he says, "in his testimonial, 'I do not hesitate to say that I am convinced I am cured.' The stiffness and pain has left me and I can sleep comfortably at night."

"I have every confidence in the Human Bake Oven to cure rheumatism, and would recommend others to take the treatment."

ected and tried out on the council, but that they have proven failures. A few years ago he suggested that the idea seemed to be that all required of a candidate was to observe the 10 commandments and keep outside of the criminal code. "The times have changed now," he declared, "and something more is necessary from those seeking office."

John Cook.

John Cook summed up his position by stating that he stood just as he did when first entering the fight. He had nothing to retract and not much to add to the statements which he had already made on many platforms. Still the speaker did not wish to give away his five minutes to some other candidate in the field, so he launched out again along the lines for which he has been standing. He touched on the gas question and remarked that the more he thought of the proposition the more he was convinced that the public should have nothing to do with it. He then warned up to his subject and was deluged right in when the chairman called time and he was obliged to pull up short and make way for the next speaker.

Dr. Campbell.

Dr. A. L. Campbell in a somewhat humorous vein, referred in his address to Edmonton as a very sick woman. He told of the maladies of the disease, and the need for a very serious operation. He assured the ratepayers that he would not collect a very large fee for the operation, since the patient was an old friend of his. He dealt at some length with the Pelican gas proposition which had slightly discolored him. He assured the audience that if they allowed the Pelican gas deal to be put over they would lose more than their eyebrows and whiskers.

R. B. Douglas.

R. B. Douglas summed up his case by stating that he was offering himself as a candidate with the firm belief that he could be of some service to the citizens of Edmonton, and particularly to the south side, where he believed there is need for many improvements. He referred to the horrible condition of the water in the past and the need for additional sewers, and declared that, if elected on Monday, he would give to the city the best that is in him.

Charles Gowen.

Charles Gowen developed into the prophetic candidate of the evening, and announced that while the successful candidates in this election would years, they would not have opportunity to serve the full term, as the elective term of four years would be in operation within the next 12 months. He reminded those who listened to him that he was formerly a candidate, and therefore many knew what to expect. He stated he promised to serve on the board as a member of the judgment dictated.

J. A. Kinney.

J. A. Kinney, the candidate nominated by organized labor, stated that he felt honored in having been elected by the trades and labor council. He assured the voters, however, that they had not prepared a platform for him. He stated he proposed to use his best endeavors to look after the welfare of all the citizens in every part of the city. He briefly reviewed some of the more important issues and stated where he would be found in the council chamber on these matters, if elected to office on Monday.

J. R. McIntosh.

J. R. McIntosh took occasion to correct the impression that he is abroad to the effect that he is one of the slate that is supposed to be in favor of getting the Pelican deal consummated. He declared himself as being opposed to the city entering into a contract at the present time when there are prospects of getting a supply much nearer home and at a better price. He argued in favor of practicing economy in connection with the administration of the affairs of the city and promised to give much of his time and attention to the duties of his office if elected as an alderman for the coming term.

S. H. Smith.

S. H. Smith declared himself in favor of good government, not the elective commission style, but the perfection of the present system. He stated that while personally opposed to the elective commission form of government, he was nevertheless in favor of allowing the people to say where they stood and what they wanted.

A. T. Mode.

A. T. Mode took advantage of the five minutes at his disposal and covered much the same ground as at the meeting in the Bijou theatre to which reference is made in another column.

Sheppard's Chair.

Rice Sheppard was also on the job when his turn came round with the share to which reference has been made in connection with the meeting on the south side.

Alderman Walsh. Alderman Walsh outlined some of the things which took place in council during the past year. He referred to the position he had taken and asked for the support of the electors on Monday that he might have opportunity serving the city for another term. He replied to a suggestion from the audience that he was in the Hume business. Alderman Walsh stated that he should own a block, part of which was rented as a hotel. He stated further that he was only interested in the sale of collecting the rent.

BIJOU THEATRE IS CROWDED TO DOORS

A big rally of the supporters of W. J. McNamara was held last night in the Bijou theatre, Whyte avenue. The house was crowded to the doors and many candidates were heard. An opportunity was given to all comers and the applause appeared to be evenly divided. The two candidates for mayoralty honors were present as well as many of the new aldermanic office seekers. Addresses were given by W. J. McNamara, Mayor Short, A. T. Mode, Rice Sheppard and others.

W. J. McNamara took up the greater portion of his 20 minutes in illustrating the effects of commission form of government as applied to the biggest project that has ever been undertaken by the United States government. He referred to the building of the Panama Canal which is now drawing near a finish. He cited for the benefit of those present some of the incidents in connection with the construction of this wonderful work. He told of the efforts of the French engineers and of the hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of machinery that he saw lying in rusted piles along the banks of the canal on the two occasions when he visited this region. He explained that it was not because of the incompetency of the French engineers that the work had to be abandoned as was later illustrated after the United States government had taken it over. They too made a failure of the job, he stated, until President Roosevelt gave the chief engineer power to operate the commission form of government. As a direct result of this move Mr. McNamara declared that it has been possible to successfully finish this stupendous undertaking.

He went on to show that it was simply the application of modern business principles in connection with the administration of any corporation that is fair. He referred to the urgent need of the extension of the sewer system on the south side and promising that one of his first duties would be to see that these necessary extensions are made. He also promised that, in pending the inauguration of the commission form of government, he would lay it down as a hard and fast rule that no more secret meetings of the council shall be held. Within the allotted 20 minutes he touched on a few more of the planks in his platform.

A. T. Mode referred to some of the incidents that have taken place during the present campaign. He spoke of the hair-pulling, mud-slinging methods that have been employed and of admitting that he was the raw material in this campaign he stated that he was not quite as raw as some of the things that have been put over by the administration. He took up considerable time in explaining the explanation given by the mayor of Mr. Marks in regard to his attitude on the taking of a plebiscite on commission form of government. The daily press came in for a scorching at his hands, one sheet in particular was severely attacked. He stated that he was not in favor of certain omissions with regard to the south side candidates.

Mr. Mode stirred up something of a row when he asserted that Mr. Foster, the campaign manager of Mayor Short on the south side, had merely formed the street gang, had drawn pay from the department during the time he has been acting for the mayor. Many voices in the audience cried back, take it back, it isn't so. Mr. Mode read a copy of the pay sheet to substantiate his arguments.

The bookkeeper and Mr. Foster himself took the platform following Mr. Mode and stated that he later was not drawing pay from the city since taking over the management of the campaign. Someone in the hall arose and asked if it is the new efficiency system, but got no reply.

Rice Sheppard elucidated practically all of the planks in his platform. He dealt with the necessity for pure water, more lights, swimming baths for the boys to keep them out of the Sash-bowen and finally got down to gash. He stated that he was opposed to the present attempt being made to force through a franchise on the people. To illustrate his point he used the chart displayed last night. This, he named, the plans and specifications of the proposition. On the one side he had a form representing the people and a large pelican, and on the other side the people are represented as having wrung the head of the pelican. This, he stated, should be the fate of all who should seek to steal any franchise from the people next year should he be elected.

Mr. Sheppard displayed another sketch in which he illustrated the shoveling out of rubbish from the mayor's office in the civic building on top of the heads of departments, who are congregated on the sidewalk below. His drawing also pictured several of the heads of departments removed and a figure standing with an axe ready to chop off some more. Mr. Sheppard did not say whether it was right or wrong to remove these heads of departments, but he would leave it for the people to decide on election day.

Mayor Short was present and was offered 20 minutes to address the meeting. When his turn came, following his opponent, the mayor simply stated that he did not wish to take up the time of other speakers, and only asked that those present and their friends turn out and cast their ballots in his favor at the polls on Monday. He then left the hall to address another meeting.

To the Electors of the City of Edmonton

In offering himself for re-election to the chief magistracy of the City of Edmonton for the year 1914, Mayor Short begs to offer for the consideration of ratepayers the following matters:

Municipal Experience

He was mayor of the city for three successive terms previous to 1913. These were the years 1902-3-4.

He helped to frame the original charter of the city and also such amendments as development has since made necessary.

He was chosen for the fourth time for the office of mayor for the year 1913.

He has at all times given considerable thought and study to municipal systems and institutions. He is progressive but not reactionary and believes that good administration is a first necessity whatever the constitutional forms may be.

1913 Administration

Shows the inauguration and carrying out of a policy of civic improvement fully up to the demands of the growth of the city.

The protection of the interests of settled labor in the city by providing a full season's work.

The carrying out of measures of finance: (a) to meet a deficit of five million dollars; (b) to carry on new work; (c) to establish and conserve the credit of the city for future monies.

The institution of economy in civic administration by cutting off of unnecessary departments.

The reorganization of the audit department of the city for greater accuracy, system and efficiency.

The securing of legislation to make possible the consolidated marketing of civic and school debentures.

The institution of a critical audit of work and a critical estimate of projected services on the double basis of economy and efficiency.

The fixing of a settled policy of pure water supply above the point of local contamination.

The institution of a consistent policy in regard to pavement extensions on the double basis of close inside and main arteries.

The construction of street railway belt lines and the linking up of city and suburban lines.

The co-operation with the School Board with respect to the establishment of a Technical School on the Syndicate avenue park site.

1914 Programme

Carrying out of the policy of securing a permanent pure water supply.

Progress in the better organization of administration departments.

The carrying out of cost investigations with respect to all types of services and the instituting of necessary reforms on a cost and efficiency basis.

The direct appeal to ratepayers for judgment on all matters of vital and near interest relating to civic improvements and expenditures, charter amendments, franchises or municipal powers and control.

WRITING UP EDMONTON
Representatives of Prominent Papers in Town Gathering Data.

It is a question if the average Edmontonian has any adequate idea of activity going on these days among Eastern Canadian and British publishing circles with regard to work descriptive of the growth and increasing importance of the capital of Alberta. There are today in the city two representatives of prominent papers busily engaged in collecting suitable photographs and other material relative to Edmonton.

Mr. Folwell, the western representative of the Toronto Saturday Night is one. He is collecting material for the January issue of the well-known monthly, "Construction," which is to depict the entire number of Edmonton and its marvelous development. The Government buildings, government houses and other prominent structures will be specially featured.

WOMEN'S MEETING IS A DRESSER BY TWO CANDIDATES

Other Aspirants Fail to Appear at McCauley School Yesterday.

MRS. JENNIE S. HILL AND RICE SHEPPARD SPEAK

Resolution Adopted Asking
That Stores Close at Six Christmas Eve.

A well attended women's meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the McCauley avenue school, the central feature of which was an address from the candidate named by the Local Council of Women, Mrs. Jennie Hill. While the other women candidates had also been invited to attend and the meeting they failed to respond to their names. "It is rather unfortunate that neither of these ladies came to meet our candidate and express their views, perhaps they have none," remarked Mrs. Cassady, the president of the local council.

Following the address given by Mrs. Hill, Rice Sheppard, an alternate candidate gave a short address. The council then carried unanimously a motion to the effect that the Edmonton retail merchants should be asked to close their stores at six o'clock on Christmas eve to give the shop girls a chance to rest up before Christmas.

When introduced by the president, Mrs. Jennie Hill said in part: "When asked six weeks or more ago to become a candidate for the Local Council of Women, I said, 'I understood that it was in no particular spirit, but I thought I would do it. I do not wish to take sides in municipal affairs, and hence have not nominated me to act as a party to repeat their views on any given question. They have nominated me to act, if elected, on behalf of the welfare of the community and of the little children. No pledges has been asked of me as to what I should do under certain circumstances. I am to serve to the best of my educational circles in the."

"Certain members of the board who profess to have no objection to a woman being elected as mayor, have used the underhand method to bring about the failure of my campaign. They or their friends have secured the nomination of at least one other candidate, solely to defeat my nomination and so avoid the question of getting into it, but to divide the vote in such a way that there will be no woman there. No person charges has been made against me, but the National Council of women has been accused of selecting a south side woman to represent the south side, and the charge has been denied by members of the executive and I ask that a further denial be made today."

"Again the charge cuts the other way, it has not been that, if elected, I should not represent the women of Edmonton, but the women of the south side. How could the true interests of the women of Edmonton conflict with those of the south side, and if they should, I think, my candidate is quite big enough to support both sides. I have been accused of being implicated in a plot against the board—which is an absolute falsehood—I am not implicated in any such plot. I have tried to tell my name, I have no copyright of my name, the name does not give it. But remember by name is 'Jennie S. Hill. Do not forget the name.'"

"Women favorable to my candidature should vote; and this cannot be done without going to the poll. If you have a vote record it and remember two south side candidates may be elected. If you wish to make sure of your candidature election you may do so by casting only one vote, and in my favor."

"I have nothing personal to gain by being on the school board—I have much to give up, as it will mean that I shall have to give up all my spare time to it. In representing the Local Council of Women, I represent the city, as this body of women includes 100 members from every respectable class in the city."

Mrs. Broadus asked the candidate to outline his educational background. "I am a graduate of the University of Alberta—holding a B.A. degree. I am a B.A. of the University of Toronto. I received a certificate as high school principal in Ontario, which is the highest certificate in the gift of the province—and specialized in moderns," stated Mrs. Hill.

On being asked whether she believed in home work for children or not Mrs. Jennie Hill expressed belief in mothers' meetings to be held under the direction of a primary superintendent of schools for the city, an appointment which the speaker considered timely to co-operate with the teachers in looking after the children's best interests.

"To Mrs. Hill a temperance woman" asked Mrs. J. J. Gaudet. "Yes, I am a temperance woman, always have been and if I had not, I certainly should have become one after my marriage as my husband understands chemistry. He would have instructed me as to my behavior in the matter."

The wonderful new Victoria records by Garson, Elman, McCormack, at Harmony Hall, adjoining Central Hotel, are individually magnificent. Never has Garson been so fervent in his singing, so strikingly beautiful in his tone and phrasing. Completely furnished sound-proof room for the use of visitors.
